Ordinance of the Board of Health.

SECTION nine of the Code of Sanitary Ordinances of the city of Auburn is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

Sec. 9. Any person or persons carrying on a regular business of farming upon land locate within the city of Auburn, may apply to the board of health for a permit authorizing him or them to keep swine upon such farms; said board may thereupon grant permission to such applicant to keep a stated number of swine upon such farm for a stated period of time, in such manner and subject to such rules, restrictions, conditions and regulations as said board shall impose, in writing, as a condition of granting such permit.

No person not having such permit shall keep swine within the limits of the city of Auburn, save proprietors of slaughter houses; and they shall keep swine only long enough to meet the requirements of proper slaughtering.

Any person violating the provisions of this section, or disregarding or failing to observe or comply with any rule, condition, requirement or restriction contained in any permit so granted, shall incur a penalty of ten dollars for each offence, which penalty is hereby imposed for any violation of, or non-compliance with, this ordinance, or of any requirement or condition contained in the permit so granted.

I certify that at a regular meeting of the board of health of the city of Auburn, held at their room, in the City Hall, Sept. 8, 1890, the foregoing ordinance was adopted and ordered published.

THE COUNTY.

AURELIUS.

CAYUGA, Sept. 12.—The repairing of sewers and the cleaning of streets make our streets look more passable now. A few planks in some of the side walks and every thing will look better.

The early train from the east yesterday morning flew past the depot and her engine and two cars went over the draw bridge. Some time that same engineer will find that draw bridge up and do some damage.

A party of two gentlemen from Skaneateles Junction came here fishing and hired a fellow to row them out on the water. They got out three or four rods when the oarsman got scared and went to turn back and filled the boat full of water, wetting them all over but doing no damage.

H. M. Wheelock and wife are visiting friends at Boonville.

We voted for water and now we are getting it.

The Falvey boys are out again with their hay press.

Nelson Terwilliger of Ithaca, is visiting his uncle, E. A. Terwilliger.

Hendry Embody visited friends at Seneca Falls to-day.

John Connors of Union Springs, visited friends here, yesterday.

Wm. F. Pierce attended the Republican convention at Moravia, yesterday.

The water has raised fifteen inches in the lake the last two days.

The four months old child of Mr. and Mrs. James Clary died this morning of cholera infantum.

LOCKE.

LOCKE, Sept. 11.—There was a pleasant surprise at Charles Fuller's last Saturday evening. It was Mrs. Fuller's birthday. They got her away and when she returned she found the house filled with guests and the tables spread and loaded with victuals and fruits of the season. Afterward ice cream was served, then came music and singing until the short hours when they all went their several ways, feeling pleased with their evening's entertainment.

R. Freelove is on the sick list with little hope of his ever getting out again, he being over eighty years old.

William Mosher is on the sick list.

Rev. Mr. Rice exchanged pulpits with Rev. Mr. Pierson of Summerhill last Sunday.

Mrs. J. Green of Cortland stopped over Sunday with J. Spalding.

Quite a number went from here to Elmira this week to attend the fair.

A Hundred Years Ago

Dictionaries were just coming into general use. People have lived without chimneys, without window-glass, without carpets, without forks, and without dictionaries, but civilized communities do not dream of doing without them. And so it is fast becoming with cyclopædias. Use becomes second nature. Once in a family and the members of the family in the habit of consulting it, they could as soon do without any other of the conveniences of civilization as without a cyclopædia.

Think of its influence for good where there are young people—and what roof does not cover young people? The very word involves the idea of educating the child, as I have already said. The wisest provision a father can make for his boys and girls is to provide them with this useful utensil.

It is said that more than 15,000 sets of the American Cyclopædia are now used in American homes. The publishers offer an edition of this work for thirty-one dollars and will send it, all charges for transportation prepaid to any one promising to pay four dollars per month.

The latest work, The Cyclopædia of American Biography, is a complete history of the literature, laws, theology, inventions and governments of the American continent. It meets the popular desire to know more about the country we live in and the men it produces. An investment in either of these works is a safe one.

INUNDATED.

MORAVIA FARMERS INCENSED AT SUFFERING LOSS BY WATER.

Their Lands Flooded and Crops Ruined—The Damage Charged up to the Auburn Dam.

The rains of the last week have done considerable damage in the south part of the county, principally in the valley beginning at Cascade and extending south to Moravia. Water in the lake has risen two feet or over and the low lands of the valley have, consequently, been inundated. Hundreds of acres of cultivated and pasture lands (none of the latter swale) that a week ago was high and dry, is to-day covered by from two to five feet of water and the prospects are that the water will not recede entirely for months. All that could be seen of the fences on either side of the railroad track, yesterday, was part of the top board or wire and four or five inches of the posts. Line fences further back were with few exceptions washed away or covered over with water.

One thing in particular that attracted the attention of a BULLETIN reporter who rode through the valley Thursday, was a large field of corn, adjacent to the railroad. Water was pouring into the field from the high ridge on the west side, in great volume, and the stalks waved and were, in the lower places, completely broken down, washed out or submerged. All that could be seen in the very highest places was the tassel and a few inches of the stalk, and nowhere was an ear exposed to view. Several other fields were in about the same condition.

Acres upon acres of buckwheat, all a splendid crop, were partially inundated, only the blossom, floating on the surface of the water, being visible. The water, the sufferers say, will not recede so that the crops can be harvested, for a long time. The corn, most of it at all events, will be destroyed, but some of the buckwheat might be saved.

But this is not the only loss. Most of the valley had been used for pasturing, the higher ground all being under cultivation. The cattle have been driven from the land and now many farmers have no other lands upon which their stock can graze. The total damage it would seem, must extend into the thousands. And still it rains. Should the water continue to rise, there is a grave possibility that Moravia might float off, perhaps through the channel into the lake.

The people up there are greatly incensed over the condition of affairs—not at the elements which a disinterested jury would find guilty of the trouble, but at all Auburn. Auburn is to blame, they say, notwithstanding that it has no string on the clouds and that its power is nearly terrestrial. It's the big dam, maintained for the benefit of manufacturers, the same dam that Moravians have meetings about and counselled and advised over with a view of having it lopped off so that the water could escape and not be held back to flood their valley.

Only a short time since a meeting of those suffering from the inundation was held, the object being to devise some plan upon which to proceed, to compel Auburn to lower the dam. It was quite a large meeting, but it was representative so to speak. What was lacking in numbers was more than compensated for in enthusiasm and earnestness. The amount of damage by the annual floods was estimated to be greater than the loss to the manufacturers, should the dam be lowered. That was the opinion accepted and endorsed by the meeting, it is said; but, of course, the meeting had to base its estimate upon opinion, not facts and figures, at least so far as Auburn's end of the argument is concerned. The meeting, it is stated, resolved that moral suasion having proven of no avail, the only recourse was to the law. What action was taken upon the resolution does not appear. It is certain however, that the city has not been served with any complaint by any attorney who had for his client the people of Moravia. It does not appear, either, that the town authorities of Moravia took cognizance of the meeting's action. It was no doubt, a meeting of citizens personally aggrieved and the intention must have been to bring action collectively for individual damages. That their intention has not been carried into effect is certain, for the matter has not, as yet, been brought to the attention of the city authorities. The last flood, however, may act as an incentive and it would not be surprising if an action were begun, soon, against the city, for the people damaged do not attribute their misfortune to the unfortunate location of their lands, but rather to what they consider, the illegal height of the dam.

The farmers whose lands are flooded had become so desperate, so a BULLETIN reporter was informed, that they had given serious consideration to the idea of coming to Auburn in force, but quietly, and tearing a few feet of the top layers of stone off, so as to redeem their lands. This would not be a good time to come and do such work, for the water is pouring over the dam in immense volume and the task, consequently, would necessarily be attended by great danger. It would be wise for the projectors of the plot to postpone their expedition a few weeks at least.

A District Meeting Addressed by Grand Lodge Officers.

A union meeting of Auburn and Griswold lodges of the Ancient Order of United Workmen was held in St. George's hall in Water street, last evening, which was largely attended by representatives from lodges of adjacent villages besides about 100 members of the local lodges. The occasion of the meeting was the presence of the grand lodge officers who hold meetings periodically in different parts of the State for the good of the order. The grand lodge officers present were Hon. Theodore H. Case, grand master workingman of Ellenville, Cattaraugus county; N. J. Norton, grand recorder of Dunkirk, and Dr. A. H. Briggs, grand medical examiner of Buffalo, Editor M. E. Kenyon of the Moravia Valley Register, a member of the Grand Lodge committee on laws, and delegates from Sennett, Owasco, Cato, Moravia, Seneca Falls, Skaneateles and other adjacent towns. The meeting opened with a secret session in which the work of the order was gone through with, and in which the grand officers took part. After the work was over with, the session was thrown open to the public and speeches followed from the grand officers present regarding the order, its aims and ob jects. George Marland, master workman of Auburn lodge, presided at the meeting and introduced Grand Master Workman Case, who set forth in a pleasing and comprehensive manner the aims, objects and workings of the order. Master workman Case was followed by Grand Recorder Norton, who presented the fraternal and social advantages to be gained from being a member of the order. He was in turn followed by Dr. A. H. Briggs who showed the benefits derived by those left behind after the death of a member and slight expenses incurred in being a member. He also stated that it is the largest benefit organization in existence, having a membership of over 440,000 active members with 4,000 regularly organized lodges in the United States.

He was here to attend the annual firemen's inspection day parade but since his arrival it has rained continuously. Nevtheless, he was well pleased with his entertainment and returned home more than satisfied.

The Western New York Fair.

The Western New York fair begins at Rochester Sept. 22 and continues to and including Sept. 26. The managers have made extraordinary efforts to make the exhibits complete and exhaustive in every particular branch and have most flattering assurances of unparalleled success. Over 500 head of thoroughbred Jersey cattle have already been entered in the prize class for premiums and others are being recorded daily. Other classes of the stock exhibit are filled and present indications point to the largest and most complete exhibit of stock ever seen upon a fair ground in this State. The display of agricultural implements will be a feature that will be well worth going across the State to see. All the new improvements and inventions will be represented. There will be racing and numerous extra attractions. Excursion tickets will be sold on all railroads.
