

NEW FENCE RUINED, HALLOWEEN CLUB LANDS IN PARLOR

These Are Samples of Rowdy Type of Franks That Provoke Property Owners and Police—Many Parents Summoned to Settle for Children's Capers—Fleet Cops Nab Flock of Culprits

Halloween celebrants who stepped over "safe and sane" bounds last evening gave the Police Department quite a headache. Complaints were received from all sections of the city and details of coppers were kept on the jump rounding up culprits.

If there was a picket fence, door mat, broom, porch swing, porch chair or anything else that was not nailed down or hidden away, it was carted away or mused up by the hundreds of boys and girls who were out in full force last night.

Scores of boys and not a few girls were brought to headquarters, names and addresses taken, and then mamma and papa were called to police headquarters to rescue their over zealous offspring.

One man reported that his brand new picket fence had been taken down another called the police when a club sailed through his front window carrying with it the window pane, a vase of flowers and crashing onto the floor.

Automobile owners came in for their troubles when they discovered that air had been let out of tires and various brands of witticisms smeared on their machines with soap and wax.

Several youths who took it upon themselves to deride coppers found to their amazement that policemen are feet of foot. They received treatment that amazed them. Some were treated to a period in the police "hoosegow" to cool their ardor.

Recorder W. Frederick R. Davis has summoned a score of parents who will have plenty on their hands when called upon to settle for damages their children caused.

TEMPLE WALLS TOPPLE UNDER GALE'S LASHING

No One Hurt As Bricks Fly in Fire Ruins Crash—Masonic Trustees Plan Safety Steps

Reports from architects and engineers were awaited today by the Masonic Temple Trustees before deciding upon their next move with regard to the future of the fire-gutted Masonic Temple, a portion of the south wall of which crashed last night, buried down by a mighty wind that sent bricks scattering for many feet.

The south wall of what had been the two top stories of the building, previous to the fire last August, and a part of the third from the top, swayed in the wind and then fell at about 10 o'clock. The roar of falling bricks and mortar, heard by a crowd, drew a crowd. Traffic halted and passersby sought places of safety.

Police erected barricades in South Street, north and south of the block and the Temple trustees again stationed guards at the entrance to the structure. Following the fire, which communicated to the Masonic Temple, Auburn's tallest business block, from the Second Presbyterian Church, the building was inspected by architects and engineers.

The opinion was expressed by some builders that, had the walls been supported by steel beams, as would have been the case in a building in use they would have resisted even the terrific force back of last night's wind. A. L. Dewdney, one of the trustees, stated shortly before noon today that the trustees still hope to use a considerable portion of the structure, but that future action will depend very largely on reports of architects and engineers examining the structure.

Forced to Move Again. A temporary roof was placed over the front portion of the building several weeks ago. This protects the sidewalk and the entrance to the building from possibility of falling brick or other objects, unless a gale hurried the higher bricks far out.

The Jacobs Press with offices and plant in the rear of the building was doing business as usual today. The firm was shut down for a while after the fire but opened shortly afterwards. Mr. Jacobs stated today that he plans to keep his plant in operation just where it is.

Other Wind Damage. "Trouble" men for power companies did some hunting before they had lines and equipment back in normal condition again, due to the howling gale that made Halloween weird indeed. Even at that, power and communication companies in Auburn and vicinity escaped without any very serious damage.

The lusty wind unloosed limbs, tossing them from trees into streets, across wires and onto roof tops. Even food store trees were uprooted. Limbs broke down some wires of the Empire Gas & Electric Company and of the New York Telephone Company.

Women Fighting Prohibition Hold Spirited Rural Rally, Make Appeal to All Wets

A well attended meeting was held under the auspices of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Mackey in Locke on Monday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Lithgow Osborne, Mrs. Paul W. Hill, Mrs. Wilfred Sisson, Mrs. R. S. Messenger and Mrs. Charles D. Osborne went out from Auburn.

The next speaker, Mrs. Hill, traced the steps which had resulted in the W. O. N. P. R. endorsing Lithgow Osborne's candidacy for Congress, and read a letter which Mrs. John S. Shepard, N. Y. State chairman, had written to prospective candidates, regarding their stand on prohibition, and both Mr. Taber's "non-committal and Mr. Osborne's emphatically affirmative reply favoring repeal of the 18th Amendment and immediate modification of the Volstead Act."

Mrs. Hill also read Mr. Taber's answer to a personal letter from her saying that he "not only was willing to speak before and be introduced by Dry Organizations, but had accepted the endorsement and permitted his name to appear not only on that of notably bone dry organization, the Law Preservation Party."

this vital matter, although he is willing to discuss the subject at length before various dry organizations. Mrs. Hill was followed by Mrs. Charles Osborne, who gave a brief account of the aims of the Organization working for: "1. Restoration of temperance under legalized liquor, and 2. Restoration through such control of economic stability."

Mrs. Osborne read extracts from a speech by the well known tax authority, Prof. E. R. A. Sellman, relative to the "enormous federal revenue which could be derived from a high license system if the liquor traffic were so conducted, amounting to considerably more than is expected from the income tax for the coming year."

In touching on the attitude of the Dry supporters Mrs. Osborne said: "However mistaken we believe them to be, there are still many honest men and women who continue to assert that prohibition has proved itself a noble and successful experiment. But bear in mind that the W. O. N. P. R. has no better aims than those who, who in the one issue where they could help to remove the curse of prohibition from this country, continue to evade their personal responsibility at the polls by voting against repeal candidates. As Lithgow Osborne himself so aptly said: 'the least those wets who are unwilling to make their habits conform to the law can do is to make the law conform to their habits.'"

Lithgow Osborne then defined his stand on the issue of the campaign, fully justifying the slogan: "You Know Where He Stands."
